PALMYRA, N. J., Aug. 25—The Burlington County Bridge Commission disclosed today that it is paying off a total of $1,030,000 in term bonds that are not due until 1973.

Fred C. Norcross, Jr., secretary-treasurer of the commission, which operates the Tacony-Palmyra and Burlington-Bristol bridges, said that the commission has been able to retire $2,350,000 in bonds since it acquired the two spans.

Besides the current term bond payment, the commission already has retired serial bonds amounting to $1,320,000.

The retirement of the $2,350,000 in bonds, Norcross added, will result in a saving of $72,869 in interest payments each year.

The payment of the $1,030,000 in term bonds 21 years before their due date, Norcross explained, is being made possible by the record revenue and traffic marks set by the two spans under county ownership.

Since their acquisition in October, 1948, the bridges have earned revenues of $7,670,764.13. A total of 38,361,253 vehicles have traveled over the spans.

The record traffic count, Norcross added, resulted from the commission lowering tolls from 35 and 30 cents to 25 cents.

Norcross explained that a drawing was held in the commission's Palmyra office to determine which term bonds would be retired. The bondholders are being notified that their bonds are being retired.

"We recognize that this is our sacred duty to safeguard and preserve the rich heritage of liberty and independence that has come to us through generations of toil, sacrifice and the shedding of blood."

REAL TEAM-WORK

Careful Check is Kept On Health, Behavior, Appearance On Trips

This is a story about the "Cavaliers" — members of the Junior Cadet Drum and Bugle Corps of Robert W. Bracken Post (American Legion) and what makes them "tick."

It is the story of the close watch kept on the face smudge, the occasional dirty neck, the case where someone forgot to wash behind the ears, the untied shoe-lace, the dusty parade hat. It is the tale of the lad who was "lost" because he wanted to look at "one more fish" and wasn't missed for the next 60 miles of a trip; the occasional punishment meted out; and of the pranks played by Cadets on their elders. It all sums up to an account of a fine corps that has brought honor to Bristol, perplexities and occasional headaches, and much pleasure to the leaders and chap-erones.

Then, too, it is the story of the relationship between Corps Commander Arthur Straccio, and two chap-erones of the group, Mrs. Marvel Durham (known to all the kids as "Mom"), and Mrs. Straccio.

One just needs to look into the "first aid kit" carried by "Mom" on all the Cadets' trips to learn that she provides all kinds of "first aid." For the bag contains not only aspirin, bandages, ointments, smelling salts, iodine and the like, but extra shoe laces, spare gloves, tape, spare mouth pieces for bugles, extra belt buckles, needles, thread of all colors, hooks, eyes, snaps, pins, buttons, and a host of items.

She might be called on at any time during a trek of the Cadets to

FALLSINGTON FAIR WAS HUGE SUCCESS

FALLSINGTON, Aug. 25 — Attendance at the colorful second Annual Street Fair sponsored by the Falls Township Civic Association far surpassed expectations according to Karl F. Ottolini, president of the association.

Hundreds of people came to see Pennsylvania Dutch motifs, and to witness the numerous games and exhibits which were part of the fair. The booths decorated gaily with lights and other devices, controlled prices as well as production and distribution, making "substantial" profits.

"Large-scale loafing, drunkenness and failure properly to attend to duty" have contributed to a "fiasco" likely to cost the United States $120,000,000 in construction of air bases in North Africa, a Senate subcommittee reported.

Commerce Secretary Sawyer said there was no present indication of a major rise in consumer prices because of the steel strike and the price rise granted the industry.

SEN. MARTIN SPEAKS

Stirring Address Delivered
At Blue Valley Farm
Show, Saturday

(Special to The Courier)

BANGOR, Aug. 25—Continuation of Democratic agricultural policies at Washington, and the spread of the Brannen Plan, would put the American farmer in a strait-jacket, regimented and enslaved, U. S. Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.) declared Saturday night in an address at the Blue Valley Farm Show, Northampton County.

The Senator said: "Meetings like this represent one of the basic elements in the greatness of America: They are living symbols of the freedoms we enjoy under the American system of government—freedoms which we hold to be a divine endowment from the Creator of the Universe.

"We meet this evening fully conscious of our responsibilities as free citizens of a free Nation.

"We recognize that this is our sacred duty to safeguard and preserve the rich heritage of liberty and independence that has come down to us through generations of toil, sacrifice and the shedding of blood.

"No segment of our population is so much interested in preserving freedom as the farmer.

"From the earliest Colonial days the men of the soil have been deeply concerned about government.

REAL TEAM-WORK

Careful Check is Kept On Health, Behavior, Appearance On Trips

This is a story about the "Cavalliers" — members of the Junior Cadet Drum and Bugle Corps of Robert W. Bracken Post (American Legion) and what makes them "tick."

It is the story of the close watch kept on the face smudge, the occasional dirty neck, the case where someone forgot to wash behind the ears, the untied shoe-lace, the dusty parade hat. It is the tale of the lad who was "lost" because he wanted to look at "one more fish" and wasn't missed for the next 60 miles of a trip; the occasional punishment meted out; and of the pranks played by Cadets on their elders. It all sums up to an account of a fine corps that has brought honor to Bristol, perplexities and occasional headaches, and much pleasure to the leaders and chap-erones.

Then, too, it is the story of the relationship between Corps Commander Arthur Straccio; and two chaperones of the group, Mrs. Marvel Durham (known to all the kids as "Mom"), and Mrs. Straccio.

One just needs to look into the "first aid kit" carried by "Mom" on all the Cadets' trips to learn that she provides all kinds of "first aid." For the bag contains not only aspirin, bandages, ointments, smelling salts, iodine and the like, but extra shoe laces, spare gloves, tape, spare mouth pieces for bugles, extra belt buckles, needles, thread of all colors, hooks, eyes, snaps, pins, buttons, and a host of items.

SLIMMING THE AIR FORCE

Air Force promises to trim down to a slim, functional fighting force bear unhappy resemblance to promises heard before. If the flying service can indeed weed out armchair officers and abolish thousands of fringe jobs, as Air Secretary Finletter has promised Congress it will, good. Most taxpayers, though, will reserve applause until they see how this turns out.

Untangling the stratified echelons of any of the three armed services is a monumental job. The Air Force, apparently eager to placate congressional criticism, proposes to call civilian management consultants in to suggest ways of streamlining operations.

In the meantime all force commanders have been given a rough formula by which they can go about telescoping their own commands. They have been given the green light to abolish full-time officer billets in public information, personal affairs, food services, recruiting, historical, postal, athletics and education.

According to Mr. Finletter, this program, applied over a period of four months in 166 Air Force units, has resulted in a saving of 1,930 officer jobs. The jobs were either abolished or passed as additional duty to other officers. Each fighter wing, for example, will lose 120 officer jobs. This figure is significant as to the amount of personnel "fat" which must be prevalent in the entire air establishment.

Mr. Finletter says the Air Force will operate during the current fiscal year under a personnel ceiling of 1,061,000 men and women, which is the same as that of last year. But officer personnel economies will permit the Air Force to reach its authorized strength of 13 wings and 1,210,000 men and women by adding only 4 per cent to its personnel. Meanwhile it will increase its fighting strength by 50 per cent.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FULTON LEWIS, JR.

(Copyright, 1952, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. The Los Angeles city schools have been the target of a major selling job by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In 1951 Superintendent Alexander J. Stoddard authorized the publication of a series of expensively printed booklets on UNESCO. In the foreword, Stoddard wrote:

"In order to co-operate with the participation of our country in the United Nations and UNESCO, we must have definite plans and blueprints for teaching about UNESCO, for putting into operation the ideals of UNESCO for building peace. We believe that in all schools the UNESCO program should be school-wide and continuous, permeating at one time or another all departments and all activities."

It must be presumed that the superintendent of the public schools of Los Angeles was merely pontificating, surely the public schools in that city have been teaching the things Stoddard and UNESCO suddenly assert are essential to the welfare of the pupils. But in the year 1951 there is set forth for the teachers and pupils, under UNESCO auspices, the following list of things to be taught:

"Know and understand how other people in other lands live; maintain an interest in world affairs; appreciate the contributions of all people to world civilization, work for a fair and just world order with security, freedom and fair play for all people."

We have just recently concluded a world war for the security, freedom and fair play for all people. We are now engaged in another.

In a report from one of the public schools in Los Angeles, it is obvious that UNESCO is making headway in selling its program. This particular school has a faculty and student UNESCO committee. It has a UN day each week wherein some form of observance of UNESCO was carried out; special UNESCO editions of the school newspaper are published; UNESCO charts and posters and a UNESCO banner are displayed in the school

Holding Family Discussions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

YESTERDAY we considered some problems of a mother who complained that her children argued with her. She implied that she also grew angry with them when they disagreed with her and resisted her explanation or decision.

Usually, when parents argue with their children, they are not engaging in an intellectual disagreement, but are really quarreling. Often it becomes a violent warfare of words. In most instances the youngest wins. Indeed, the average child over six or eight, when faced with an unwelcome decision or command by his parents, has a strong hope of changing the decision in his favor if he can lure them into an argument.

Child Will Win

As I pointed out yesterday, such arguments generally grow out of the parent's indecisiveness and undue zeal to be wholly reasonable. As a rule, when a youngster asks to know the reason why, he already knows, but is merely maneuvering for a more favorable position, knowing also very well that if he can cause the parent to grow uncertain, confused and upset emotionally, he himself will win. Now when a parent engages in a heated argument with his own child, this parent, no doubt, is more distraught and less logical than his child is.

On the other hand, that child is fortunate whose parents can disagree with him without heat, can argue with him on a wholly intellectual level. It would be fine, too, if this child hears his parents discuss politics or any other matter in a calm and logical fashion. With the national elections approaching, not many youths will hear a lofty exchange of disagreeing views, even when the parents are highly educated otherwise. Imagine the wordy warfare that children will be exposed to in their homes from now till next November fourth. Sometimes the battling warriors will be parent and son or daughter.

Wouldn't it be very desirable for us parents to discipline ourselves as never to stoop to name-calling or abusive childish utterances with our children or anybody else?

You and I often listen to the Town Meeting of the Air and similar forums. Haven't you been pleasantly impressed with the self-restraint, poise and sportsmanship by the various speakers who disagree?

Greatest Achievement

I wish that many parents and teachers would listen to and observe, with children, many of these unusual forums of the air, which contribute so much to the idea and practice of disagreeing without heat. As you will recall, Benjamin Franklin said in his autobiography that one of the greatest human achievements is to be able to disagree with another person without feeling of acting angry.

Most of the recent interviews on the air with the various aspirants to the presidency have held to a pretty high level of self-restraint and sportsmanship, forecasting, we hope, a national campaign of high order. See what a contribution that could be toward family discussion.

building; panel discussions on UNESCO are held frequently.

It must be borne in mind that UNESCO is an international organization, allegedly designed to reduce illiteracy, improve teaching standards and disseminate information on a global basis. As UNESCO emerges in practice, the nation with the best public school system in the world is the prime target; not the nations with thousands of illiterates or those with no public school institutions at all.

The Los Angeles school board is matched in its affection for UNESCO by an organization called the Kansas Commission for UNESCO. One of the organizers was Milton Eisenhower, brother of the Republican nominee for the Presidency. Milton Eisenhower was president of Kansas State College at Manhattan at the time, and a member of the U. S. Commission for UNESCO. The State of Kansas was chosen as a workshop for UNESCO, just as the NEA and UNESCO chose the Los Angeles public schools for a workshop on techniques of propaganda for schools.

The methods of promoting UNESCO on a state-wide basis in Kansas are set forth in the News Bulletin published by the Kansas Commission:

1. Give UNESCO non-partisan status.
2. Need for worldwide organization.
3. Strength must come from grass roots.
4. Work through local organizations only.
5. Work particularly in schools and libraries and churches.
6. Organize every county, reach every person.
7. Priority on mass participation.
8. Radio, television, movies, press

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

A Tough Fight, Indeed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.

Within the past week at least one thing has become plain. In this campaign the Democratic candidates, if elected, will carry forward the Roosevelt-Truman policies; the Republicans are the ones from whom a change in direction may be expected. In other words, regardless of personalities, and regardless of General Eisenhower's exceedingly loud middle-of-the-road speech last Wednesday, there is a choice.

Confirmation of this was given in the recent CIO endorsement of Governor Stevenson, engineered by that of the Americans for Democratic Action, headed by Mr. Francis Biddle and soon to be followed by the so-called Liberal party of New York, of which Mr. A. A. Berle is the head. Actually there was no need for these endorsements to make the situation clear. Mr. Stevenson's record had shown that these far-left wing organizations were his friends. With them he sees eye to eye! The effort to laugh off the idea that he is the captive of these groups fell flat because quite obviously he could not have been nominated without them and is certainly dependent upon them and the Truman jobholder machine for election.

No informed person, of course, had any doubt of the nature of Mr. Stevenson's "true liberalism" after his selection of Mr. Wilson Wyatt as chairman of his campaign committee, of Mr. Averell Harriman as one of his chief advisers and Prof. Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., as his "research" aide in Springfield. Professor Schlesinger is one of those charming "liberals" who still think it witty to exude cheap sneers at Mr. Herbert Hoover. As things now stand Mr. Stevenson, though called a "moderate" by his propagandists, is supported by exactly the same "liberal" far left aggregations which supported Mr. Truman in 1948 and which would be supporting him now had he been nominated. Also they would have supported Harriman, Kefauver, Barkley or any other Democrat—except one from the South.

These groups, plus the Negroes (who seem to be in process of procreation) and the jobholders constitute the Democratic army which had won the last four elections. It is a tremendously potent combination and, on form, should win "again and again and again." The deceit practiced upon the farmers last time was so successful that the Democratic managers are sure it can be repeated. There is also the extraordinary fact that one out of every nine persons in the country is now, directly or indirectly in some form or other, receiving Federal funds handed out by a Democratic Administration. It is not easy to overestimate the political effect of that. Even with a weak candidate, as Mr. Truman was in 1948, the advantages are immense.

Add all this up and the total seems to make the Democrats unbeatable—and perhaps they are. Nonetheless, there are factors on the other side which make even those Republicans who fully realize what they are up against exceedingly hopeful—that is, if the great mass of voters who, for one reason or another, stayed away from the polls last time come out and vote. First, there is the widespread conviction that the Democratic party has been in power far too long for the national health and a change is imperative. Second, there is the fact that the Republican candidate is personally the most popular, respected and best-equipped man that party has named in twenty years. Third, there is the unprecedented corruption, incompetency and waste with which, under long Democratic control, the Government has become saturated.

Fourth, there is the increasing number of Democrats who, for a variety of reasons, have become apprehensively disgusted with New Deal-Fair Deal policies and realize Governor Stevenson will not—and cannot—change these, even though the ultimate economic disaster becomes clearer every day. Fifth, there is the growing feeling of insecurity despite the Democratic slogan of "you never had it so good," which slogan seems strikingly refuted by the recent report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics revealing that the average family with income of $5,000 after withholding, income and other taxes, ends the year with a $400 deficit, which has to be made up either by digging into savings or borrowing.

Sixth, there is increasing awareness that the rumors of inflation, which is the greatest of all national dangers, cannot be averted by the Democratic Administration whose policies and political alliances have promoted it. Finally, there is the fact that if you add all the Democratic groups together, they do not come even close to a majority of the potential voters. Therefore, it seems certain that the November result is in the hands of the millions of independent voters so many of whom failed to vote last time. All of which makes it a very tough fight, indeed—from whatever angle it is viewed.

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Courier:
Message to the Bensalem Township Voters.
Tuesday, August 26th is registration day. Make this an all out registration day. Be eligible to vote in November.
In November you may be asked to vote for a first class township in Bensalem.

Consider every problem wisely before you cast your vote.

Consider these problems:
With a first class township, quite a few of the men who are elected to public office, will then hold their office by appointment. Do you want to throw away your right to elect men of office, by vote, if they are incompetent? You will do so if you vote for a first class township.

You want garbage disposal. How much does your garbage disposal cost you now? Twenty-five cents a week? Do you think a first class township, can buy the equipment necessary, and hire the men cheaper than that? You will have to pay a higher tax in order to buy trucks and keep the men to run them on the payroll.

You want mail delivery. Mail delivery is possible in a second class township. Lower Andalusia, a second class township, has mail delivery.

Civic groups are a good thing in any community. Taxpayer's associations are also a good thing. But the taxpayer must consider all the pros and cons; there are no one-sided problems.

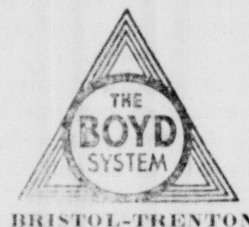

I am doing my best to see as many people, as possible, in my territory. I am sorry that I will not be able to see you all. However, get out and register on Tuesday. Don't voice your opinion on the street corner; voice it at the polls. Your Republican Committeeman, ROBERT STIEGELMAN.

SLIMMING THE AIR FORCE

Air Force promises to trim down to a slim, functional fighting force bear unhappy resemblance to promises heard before. If the flying service can indeed weed out armchair officers and abolish thousands of fringe jobs, as Air Secretary Finletter has promised Congress it will, good. Most taxpayers, though, will reserve applause until they see how this turns out.

Untangling the stratified echelons of any of the three armed services is a monumental job. The Air Force, apparently eager to placate congressional criticism, proposes to call civilian management consultants in to suggest ways of streamlining operations.

In the meantime all force commanders have been given a rough formula by which they can go about telescoping their own commands. They have been given the green light to abolish full time officer billets in public information, personal affairs, food services, recruiting, historical, postal, athletics and education.

According to Mr. Finletter, this program, applied over a period of four months in 166 Air Force units, has resulted in a saving of 1,930 officer jobs. The jobs were either abolished or passed as additional duty to other officers. Each lighter wing, for example, will lose 120 officer jobs. This figure is significant as to the amount of personnel "fat" which must be prevalent in the entire air establishment.

Mr. Finletter says the Air Force will operate during the current fiscal year under a personnel ceiling of 1,061,000 men and women, which is the same as that of last year. But officer personnel economies will permit the Air Force to reach its authorized strength of 13 wings and 1,210,000 men and women by adding only 4 per cent to its personnel. Meanwhile it will increase its fighting strength by 50 per cent.

"WASHINGTON REPORT"

By FELTON LEWIS, JR.
(Copyright, 1952,
King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. The Los Angeles city schools have been the target of a major selling job by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In 1951 Superintendent Alexander J. Stoddard authorized the publication of a series of expensively printed booklets on UNESCO. In the foreword, Stoddard wrote:

"In order to co-operate with the participation of our country in the United Nations and UNESCO, we must have definite plans and blueprints for teaching about UNESCO, for putting into operation the ideals of UNESCO for building peace. We believe that in all schools the UNESCO program should be school-wide and continuous, permeating at one time or another all departments and all activities."

It must be presumed that the superintendent of the public schools of Los Angeles was merely pontificating, surely the public schools in that city have been teaching the things Stoddard and UNESCO suddenly assert are essential to the welfare of the pupils. But in the year 1951 there is set forth for the teachers and pupils, under UNESCO auspices, the following list of things to be taught:

"Know and understand how other people in other lands live; maintain an interest in world affairs; appreciate the contributions of all people to world civilization, work for a fair and just world order with security, freedom and fair play for all people."

We have just recently concluded a world war for the security, freedom and fair play for all people. We are now engaged in another.

In a report from one of the public schools in Los Angeles, it is obvious that UNESCO is making headway in selling its program. This particular school has a faculty and student UNESCO committee. It has a UN day each week wherein some form of observance of UNESCO was carried out; special UNESCO editions of the school newspaper are published; UNESCO charts and posters and a UNESCO banner are displayed in the school

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

YESTERDAY we considered some problems of a mother who complained that her children argued with her. She implied that she also grew angry with them when they disagreed with her and resisted her explanation or decision.

Usually, when parents argue with their children, they are not engaging in an intellectual disagreement, but are really quarreling. Often it becomes a violent warfare of words. In most instances the youngsters win. Indeed, the average child over six or eight, when faced with an unwelcome decision or command by his parents, has a strong hope of changing the decision in his favor if he can lure them into an argument.

Child Will Win

As I pointed out yesterday, such arguments generally grow out of the parent's indecisiveness and undue zeal to be wholly reasonable. As a rule, when a youngster asks to know the reason why, he already knows, but is merely maneuvering for a more favorable position, knowing also very well that if he can cause the parent to grow uncertain, confused and upset emotionally, he himself will win. Now when a parent engages in a heated argument with his own child, this parent, no doubt, is more distraught and less logical than his child is.

On the other hand, that child is fortunate whose parents can disagree with him without heat, can argue with him on a wholly intellectual level. It would be fine, too, if this child hears his parents discuss politics or any other matter in a calm and logical fashion. With the national elections approaching, not many youths will hear a lofty exchange of disagreeing views, even when the parents are highly educated otherwise. Imagine the wordy warfare that children will be exposed to in their homes from now till next November fourth. Sometimes the battling warriors will be parent and son or daughter.

Wouldn't it be very desirable for us parents so to discipline ourselves as never to stoop to name-calling or abusive childish utterances with our children or anybody else?

You and I often listen to the Town Meeting of the Air and similar forums. Haven't you been pleasantly impressed with the self-restraint, poise and sportsmanship by the various speakers who disagree?

Greatest Achievement

I wish that many parents and teachers would listen to and observe, with children, many of these unusual forums of the air, which contribute so much to the idea and practice of disagreeing without heat. As you will recall, Benjamin Franklin said in his autobiography that one of the greatest human achievements is to be able to disagree with another person without feeling of acting angry.

Most of the recent interviews on the air with the various aspirants to the presidency have held to a pretty high level of self-restraint and sportsmanship, forecasting, we hope, a national campaign of high order. See what a contribution that could be to ward family discussion.

building; panel discussions on UNESCO are held frequently.

It must be borne in mind that UNESCO is an international organization, allegedly designed to reduce illiteracy, improve teaching standards and disseminate information on a global basis. As UNESCO emerges in practice, the nation with the best public school system in the world is the prime target; not the nations with thousands of illiterates or those with no public school institutions at all.

The Los Angeles school board is matched in its affection for UNESCO by an organization called the Kansas Commission for UNESCO. One of the organizers was Milton Eisenhower, brother of the Republican nominee for the Presidency. Milton Eisenhower was president of Kansas State College at Manhattan at the time, and a member of the U. S. Commission for UNESCO. The State of Kansas was chosen as a workshop for UNESCO, just as the NEA and UNESCO chose the Los Angeles public schools for a workshop on techniques of propaganda for schools.

The methods of promoting UNESCO on a state-wide basis in Kansas are set forth in the News Bulletin published by the Kansas Commission:

1. Give UNESCO non-partisan status.
2. Need for worldwide organization.
3. Strength must come from grass roots.
4. Work through local organizations only.
5. Work particularly in schools and libraries and churches.
6. Organize every county, reach every person.
7. Priority on mass participation.
8. Radio, television, movies, press must be used to help propagandize peace.

9. UNESCO to depend to a large measure on efforts of state and local groups to carry message to people.

10. Must have publicity program. I repeat, UNESCO is an international organization largely financed by the U. S. for helping backward areas of the world. Why the feverish sales program in America? Here we need a renewed interest in national elections, when less than 50 per cent of the eligible voters go to the polls. Let's entice our young to vote in our own elections and participate in before filling them full of ideas of global governments and the need for their participation in these schemes.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

A Tough Fight, Indeed

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.

Within the past week at least one thing has become plain. In this campaign the Democratic candidate, if elected, will carry forward the Roosevelt-Truman policies; the Republicans are the ones from whom a change in direction may be expected. In other words, regardless of personalities, and regardless of General Eisenhower's exceedingly sound middle-of-the-road speech last Wednesday, there is a choice.

Confirmation of this was given in the recent CIO endorsement of Governor Stevenson, engineered by Mr. Philip Murray, followed by that of the Americans for Democratic Action, headed by Mr. Francis Biddle and soon to be followed by the so-called Liberal party of New York, of which Mr. A. A. Berle is the head. Actually there was no need for these endorsements to make the situation clear. Mr. Stevenson's record had shown that these far left-wing organizations were his friends. With them he sees eye to eye! The effort to laugh off the idea that he is the captive of these groups fell flat because quite obviously he could not have been nominated without them and is certainly dependent upon them and the Truman jobholder machine for election.

No informed person, of course, had any doubt of the nature of Mr. Stevenson's "true liberalism" after his selection of Mr. Wilson Wyatt as chairman of his campaign committee, of Mr. Averell Harriman as one of his chief advisers and Prof. Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., as his "research" aide in Springfield. Professor Schlesinger is one of those charming "liberals" who still think it witty to exude cheap sneers at Mr. Herbert Hoover. As things now stand Mr. Stevenson, though called a "moderate" by his propagandists, is supported by exactly the same "liberal" far left aggregations which supported Mr. Truman in 1948 and which would be supporting him now had he been nominated. Also they would have supported Harriman, Kefauver, Barkley or any other Democrat—except one from the South.

These groups, plus the Negroes (who seem to be in process of propagation) and the jobholders constitute the Democratic army which had won the last four elections. It is a tremendously potent combination and, on form, should win "again and again and again." The deceit practiced upon the farmers last time was so successful that the Democratic managers are sure it can be repeated. There is also the extraordinary fact that one out of every nine persons in the country is now, directly or indirectly in some form or other, receiving Federal funds handed out by a Democratic Administration. It is not easy to overestimate the political effect of that. Even with a weak candidate, as Mr. Truman was in 1948, the advantages are immense.

Add all this up and the total seems to make the Democrats unbeatable—and perhaps they are. Nonetheless, there are factors on the other side which make even those Republicans who fully realize what they are up against exceedingly hopeful—that is, if the great mass of voters who, for one reason or another, stayed away from the polls last time come out and vote. Second, there is the fact that the Republican candidate is personally the Fourth, there is the increasing number of Democrats who, for a variety of reasons, have become apprehensively disgusted with New Deal-Fair Deal policies and realize Governor Stevenson will not—and cannot—change these, even though the ultimate economic disaster becomes clearer every day. Fifth, there is the growing feeling of insecurity despite the Democratic slogan of "you never had it so good," which slogan seems strikingly refuted by the recent report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics revealing that the average family with income of $5,000 after withholding, income and other taxes, ends the year with a $400 deficit, which has to be made up either by digging into savings or borrowing.

Claim Brennan Plan Will Shackle Farmer

They know that their economic, cultural and spiritual progress depends upon clean, economical and efficient government.

"The American farmer is an independent citizen who knows the value of self-reliance, hard work and thrift. He wants to build his security on his own efforts, his own skill. He asks no special favors from the government. All he asks is a fair price at the market for his products and a fair price when he buys the things he needs.

"The farmer wants to stand on his own feet. He wants to do his own thinking. He wants to be free from restrictions, regulations and regimentation by bureaucratic government officials.

"One of the major victories for good government to which the farmers of America made a big contribution resulted from the firm and determined opposition of the leading farm organizations to the Brannan Plan.

"If that fantastic scheme had been enacted all agriculture would be operating today in a government strait-jacket.

"The six million farmers of America would be living under a political dictatorship. Their self-reliance and independence would be destroyed and would be replaced by hand-outs from Washington.

"Most of you are familiar with the general outlines of the Brannan Plan and its double-dealing promise of low prices to the consumer and high income for the farmer at tremendous cost to the taxpayers.

"Of course, every farmer would get his orders. He would be told how many acres he could plant, what crops he could raise, how to cultivate his land, and where to sell his product.

"Fortunately, the farmers recognized the danger. They valued their independence and their individual freedom too highly to be led into that Socialistic trap.

"They realized that the Brannan Plan was part of a pattern that could destroy the American system of government.

"So strong and so effective was the opposition of the farmers that the scheme was blocked in the Agriculture Committee of the Senate and did not even come to the floor for a vote.

"No doubt the farmers had in mind the warning given by that great champion of individual freedom, Thomas Jefferson, when he said:

"We were directed from Washington when to sow and what to reap we should soon want bread... when all government, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will become venal and oppressive."

"Jefferson recognized the value of agriculture as one of the most important of all activities of mankind. He feared the time when a majority of the people would no longer be tillers of the soil. He feared that time when the Federal government would assume power to regulate and control the farmer.

"He fought against the dangers to liberty that come from an all-powerful centralized government and government at oppressive cost.

"Today, 150 years after Thomas Jefferson, we must take up that fight if individual freedom is to be preserved.

"Let me give you another, more recent example of the sturdy independence of the farmer that is deserving of our praise and appreciation.

"Down in Wythe County, in southwestern Virginia, this summer, drought conditions threatened the farmers with disaster. They were urged by Federal farm bureaucrats to apply for government loans. But they had the backbone to solve their problem in the old-fashioned, self-reliant American way.

"They met and passed a resolution rejecting Federal aid. They worked out a plan with local banks to take care of their needs. They figured they had no right to lean on the government and that Federal aid would cost them just as much or more in the long run.

"More of that spirit would go a long way to solve America's grave problems today.

"Yes, today we have many grave problems to which we must find solutions if we are to survive as a great and powerful nation.

"We are confronted by dangerous threats to our freedom at home and abroad.

"What are these dangers?

"Briefly summarized they are as follows:

"1. The threat of another global war which may be brought about by a foreign policy of weakness and indecision.

"2. National bankruptcy into which we can be plunged by wasteful and extravagant spending by government.

"3. Excessive debt and taxation which takes away the earnings of the people, robs them of opportunity and blocks the expansion of productive enterprise.

"4. Inflation which destroys purchasing power of the dollar and wipes out much of the value of our savings, insurance policies, pensions and annuities.

"5. Communism, which conspires behind the Iron Curtain for the destruction of all human freedom and spreads its poisonous, godless philosophy in our own midst.

"6. Corruption which destroys the integrity of the government and has always preceded the downfall of great nations.

"7. Moral decay, selfishness and greed among the people.

"8. Concentration of power at the Federal level, which results in a planned, regimented and controlled economy in the Socialistic pattern and destroys freedom of the individual.

"9. Failure to implant in the hearts and minds of our young people a proper appreciation of the glories of America and what it means to be an American.

"10. Indifference to our individual responsibility for good government and neglect of our civic duties.

"My fellow Pennsylvanians, when I bring these dangers to your attention, I speak as an American who is gravely concerned and deeply worried—just as I know you are.

"I do not bring them to your attention from a political standpoint. I say that patriotism and love of country calls upon every one of us, regardless of his political affiliation to give these problems careful and conscientious study. Unless we know and understand our true situation, we cannot decide what is best for America.

"We must defend America against every danger that threatens to undermine and destroy the greatness of our Republic.

"Daniel Webster uttered a great and classic truth when he said:

"The first object of a free people is the preservation of their liberty."

"To preserve our liberty we must be strong in its defense.

"We must have military strength, financial strength, industrial strength, agricultural strength and above all, moral and spiritual strength.

"We must have the strength of an honest, decent, clean living people who believe in and practice the old-fashioned virtues of truth, courage, self-reliance, sacrifice, tolerance and love of God.

"Those qualities cannot be legislated. They are founded on the eternal truths of the Holy Bible. They are the qualities which inspired and guided the deeply religious pioneers of our early days who cleared the forests, and built our first schools and churches.

"They were the inspiration of the patriots and heroes of our struggle for independence. They have pointed the way for the honored statesmen, preachers, educators, soldiers and the great army of Americans whose brain and muscle built for us this blessed land of freedom and opportunity.

"We must keep it that way.

"We must keep America as a land in which a humble rail splitter born in poverty and reared in hardship, could become President of the United States, like Abraham Lincoln.

"We want an America in which a young man experimenting with bits of wire could become a Thomas Edison and illuminate the world.

"We want an America in which a youthful mechanic, tinkering with tools in a little workshop, could become a Henry Ford and change the whole course of industry and transportation.

"We want an America in which two brothers named Wright, could apply their faith and brains and skill to the problem of human flight and give wings to all mankind.

"We want an America in which the boy on the farm can continue to achieve leadership in government, in business and industry, in the professions, science, education and the church, just as so many have done in the past.

"We want an America in which every citizen will recognize that 'We the People' are the government.

"The solution of our Nation's problem is the business of every one of us.

"Let us apply ourselves to that task with faith, courage, understanding and patriotism.

"If we are strong in the faith of our forefathers, if we strive in our daily lives to exemplify the American way of life, we can overcome the dangers that threaten us. We can make our Republic a potent force for peace, freedom and justice in the world."

Claim Brennan Plan Will Shackle Farmer

They know that their economic, cultural and spiritual progress depends upon clean, economical and efficient government.

"The American farmer is an independent citizen who knows the value of self-reliance, hard work and thrift. He wants to build his security on his own efforts, his own skill. He asks no special favors from the government. All he asks is a fair price at the market for his products and a fair price when he buys the things he needs.

"The farmer wants to stand on his own feet. He wants to do his own thinking. He wants to be free from restrictions, regulations and regimentation by bureaucratic government officials.

"One of the major victories for good government to which the farmers of America made a big contribution resulted from the firm and determined opposition of the leading farm organizations to the Brannan Plan.

"If that fantastic scheme had been enacted all agriculture would be operating today in a government strait-jacket.

"The six million farmers of America would be living under a political dictatorship. Their self-reliance and independence would be destroyed and would be replaced by hand-outs from Washington.

"Most of you are familiar with the general outlines of the Brannan Plan and its double-dealing promise of low prices to the consumer and high income for the farmer at tremendous cost to the taxpayers.

"Of course, every farmer would get his orders. He would be told how many acres he could plant, what crops he could raise, how to cultivate his land, and where to sell his product.

"Fortunately, the farmers recognized the danger. They valued their independence and their individual freedom too highly to be led into that Socialist trap.

"They realized that the Brannan Plan was part of a pattern that could destroy the American system of government.

"So strong and so effective was the opposition of the farmers that the scheme was blocked in the Agriculture Committee of the Senate and did not even come to the floor for a vote.

"No doubt the farmers had in mind the warning given by that great champion of individual freedom, Thomas Jefferson, when he said:

"Were we directed from Washington when to sow and what to reap we should soon want bread... when all government, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of all power, it will become venal and oppressive."

"Jefferson recognized the value of agriculture as one of the most important of all activities of mankind. He feared the time when a majority of the people would no longer be tillers of the soil. He feared that time when the Federal government would assume power to regulate and control the farmer.

"He fought against the dangers to liberty that come from an all-powerful centralized government and government at oppressive cost.

"Today, 150 years after Thomas Jefferson, we must take up that fight if individual freedom is to be preserved.

"Let me give you another, more recent example of the sturdy independence of the farmer that is deserving of our praise and appreciation.

"Down in Wythe County, in southwestern Virginia, this summer, drought conditions threatened the farmers with disaster. They were urged by Federal farm bureaucrats to apply for government loans. But they had the backbone to solve their problem in the old-fashioned, self-reliant American way.

"They met and passed a resolution rejecting Federal aid. They worked out a plan with local banks to take care of their needs. They figured they had no right to lean on the government and that Federal aid would cost them just as much or more in the long run.

"More of that spirit would go a long way to solve America's grave problems today.

"Yes, today we have many grave problems to which we must find solutions if we are to survive as a great and powerful nation.

"We are confronted by dangerous threats to our freedom at home and abroad.

"What are these dangers?

"Briefly summarized they are as follows:

"1. The threat of another global war which may be brought about by a foreign policy of weakness and indecision.

"2. National bankruptcy into which we can be plunged by wasteful and extravagant spending by government.

"3. Excessive debt and taxation which takes away the earnings of the people, robs them of opportunity and blocks the expansion of productive enterprise.

"4. Inflation which destroys purchasing power of the dollar and wastes out much of the value of our savings, insurance policies, pensions and annuities.

"5. Communism, which conspires behind the Iron Curtain for the destruction of all human freedom and spreads its poisonous, godless philosophy in our own midst.

"6. Corruption which destroys the integrity of the government and has always preceded the downfall of great nations.

"7. Moral decay, selfishness and greed among the people.

"8. Concentration of power at the Federal level, which results in a planned, regimented and controlled economy in the Socialist pattern and destroys freedom of the individual.

"9. Failure to implant in the hearts and minds of our young people a proper appreciation of the glories of America and what it means to be an American.

"10. Indifference to our individual responsibility for good government and neglect of our civic duties.

"My fellow Pennsylvanians, when I bring these dangers to your attention, I speak as an American who is gravely concerned and deeply worried—just as I know you are. "I do not bring them to your attention from a political standpoint. I say that patriotism and love of country calls upon every one of us, regardless of his political affiliation to give these problems careful and conscientious study. Unless we know and understand our true situation, we cannot decide what is best for America.

"We must defend America against every danger that threatens to undermine and destroy the greatness of our Republic.

"Daniel Webster uttered a great and classic truth when he said: "The first object of a free people is the preservation of their liberty."

"To preserve our liberty we must be strong in its defense.

"We must have military strength, financial strength, industrial strength, agricultural strength and above all, moral and spiritual strength.

"We must have the strength of an honest, decent, clean living people who believe in and practice the old fashioned virtues of truth, courage, self-reliance, sacrifice, tolerance and love of God.

"Those qualities cannot be legislated. They are founded on the eternal truths of the Holy Bible. They are the qualities which inspired and guided the deeply religious pioneers of our early days who cleared the forests, and built our first schools and churches.

"They were the inspiration of the patriots and heroes of our struggle for independence. They have pointed the way for the honored statesmen, preachers, educators, soldiers and the great army of Americans whose brain and muscle built for us this blessed land of freedom and opportunity.

"We must keep it that way.

"We must keep America as a land in which a humble rail splitter born in poverty and reared in hardship, could become President of the United States, like Abraham Lincoln.

"We want an America in which a young man experimenting with bits of wire could become a Thomas Edison and illuminate the world.

"We want an America in which a youthful mechanic, tinkering with tools in a little workshop, could become a Henry Ford and change the whole course of industry and transportation.

"We want an America in which two brothers named Wright, could apply their faith and brains and skill to the problem of human flight and give wings to all mankind.

"We want an America in which the boy on the farm can continue to achieve leadership in government, in business and industry, in the professions, science, education and the church, just as so many have done in the past.

"We want an America in which every citizen will recognize that 'We the People' are the government.

"The solution of our Nation's problem is the business of every one of us.

"Let us apply ourselves to that task with faith, courage, understanding and patriotism.

"If we are strong in the faith of our forefathers, if we strive in our daily lives to exemplify the American way of life, we can overcome the dangers that threaten us. We can make our Republic a potent force for peace, freedom and justice in the world."

Bristol Faculty Member And Delhaas Teacher Wed

A young woman who this term will teach science at Delhaas high school was united in marriage to a member of the faculty of Bristol borough schools yesterday in St. Ann's R. C. Church at the hour of two. The nuptial ceremony united Miss Violet T. DiNunzio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel DiNunzio, 606 Clymer street, and Mr. Joseph F. Sagolla, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sagolla, 344 Dörrance street, the bride's father escorting her to the altar, as Mrs. Louis V. Frease, Mill street, played a bridal march.

Mrs. Frease also provided accompaniment for Miss Anna Moffo, of Wayne, who sang "Ave Maria," "Panis Angelicus," and "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Jovina Narcisi, Washington street, who served in the capacity of bridesmaid, was attired in lavender, her ballerina length gown having strapless bodice and jacket of Chantilly lace, and skirt of nylon tulle. From a crown of orange blossoms there was arranged a veil of lavender, and the attendant carried a bouquet composed of three white orchids with lavender lips, white plumes and ivy.

The white bridal gown had nylon tulle skirt of ballerina length, and Chantilly lace bodice. Her fingertip veil of nylon tulle fell from a sweetheart style head-piece of lace. The bride carried a bouquet composed of a white orchid, two orchids with lavender lips, white plumes and ivy.

Mr. Salvatore Sagolla, Philadelphia, was best man for his brother. The wedding reception was held in the social hall of St. Ann's Church.

Leaving for a trip to the Pocono mountains and Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Mrs. Sagolla was attired in a navy blue linen suit, matching accessories, and wore the orchids from her bouquet. The two will make their home at 606 Clymer street.

Choice of Mrs. DiNunzio, the bride's mother, for the wedding, was a slate blue crepe dress, navy blue accessories, feathered velvet hat. Mrs. Sagolla was attired in a dress of pink lace and white accessories. Both wore lavender orchids.

The former Miss DiNunzio is a graduate of Ballard high school, Seattle, Wash., and of Temple University, Phila., she being a member of Delta Sigma Epsilon Sorority. Her husband is an alumnus of Bristol high school, and of Temple University. He is elementary physical education instructor of Bristol schools.

"For me to live is Christ!"

If you were to ask me what Jesus means to me, I could think of no better reply than these six short words of the Apostle Paul. I can say this because in Christ I have found the final answer to my greatest needs. There is not a blessing in my life which, if I trace it back to the hand which gave it, does not lead me back to the Son of God. If there is anything good, anything true, anything that has brought lasting joy and gladness into my life — I recognize it as a gift which has come to me through faith in Jesus Christ, my Savior. In Him, above all, I have found complete forgiveness for all my sins. For, "The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin." Having this forgiveness, peace, joy and hope, I have found life. A life that is full and free. A life that is glorious and triumphant. This is the "abundant life." The life that is led in Christ Jesus. This life brings to me pardon, power, companionship, truth, and ends in heaven.

LAWN SEEDING STARTS ON SCHEDULE

Crews Starting Preparation of Soil for Sowing of Grass Seed

GROWTH TECHNIQUE

By Staff Reporter

LEVITTOWN, Aug. 25 — When Levitt & Sons, Inc., announce that a project will begin on a certain date, it is a fair assumption that it will actually start at that time or close to it. It had been announced that the preparation of lawns for seeding would begin about August 15. Sure enough, on that date crews were at work on this phase of landscaping.

Watching this operation is as fascinating as seeing the mass production techniques applied to the planting of the shrubs and trees about a month ago. Wives and children — and even husbands who happened to be at home at the time were observed standing by to witness the work.

First, a bulldozer goes though the entire area surrounding a group of houses, grading the ground. This, of course, is not any different from what anyone does in preparing his lawn for grass, but the assembly-line operation by which it is done in Levittown is what provides the interest.

A second man driving a scraping machine follows the bulldozer in order to level the work of the first machine a little. The scraper also pulls to one edge of the lawn stones and weeds.

Crews of workmen then follow this machine with wheelbarrows and shovels which they use in picking up small rocks and trash that the scraper missed. They are then followed by another crew which goes through with rakes to give that final touch of cleanliness to the area, which is now ready for the seeding job, which will undoubtedly also be performed in mass operation.

LEVITTOWN, Aug. 25 — A young woman who was born in Scotland, and who came to this country as a child, is now a resident of Levittown. She is Mrs. Edward Cackowsky, and she and her husband and their eight-year-old son, Edward, live at 130 Stonybrook drive. The family moved to Bucks county from Roslyn, L. I. N. Y. Mr. Cackowsky's birthplace was Glen Cove, L. I.

The Frazer firm employs Mr. Cackowsky, the firm installing glass and doing the painting on the local houses.

Mr. Cackowsky, a veteran of service in the Pacific area during World War II, was very active in the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Roslyn. In fact he is a past commander, and his wife is a past president of the Ladies Auxiliary of that post. Mr. Cackowsky has also been active in the Knights of Columbus, and was a trustee of Bryant Library, Roslyn.

Much interested in sports, the head of the house played football at Glen Cove high school. He still follows the game with considerable interest.

The family has made two winter trips to Mexico, spending some time in the southern part of that country, Mexico City and beyond. Edward, on these trips, enjoyed the stops for "chats" with the Mexican and Indian children in play language familiar to all children. Mrs. Cackowsky speaks of one of the biggest thrills as that of the trip over the Mexican mountains, "the long, steady climb being 180 miles." She adds: "We want to go back, for it is such an interesting and colorful country."

Bristol Faculty Member And Delhaas Teacher Wed

A young woman who this term will teach science at Delhaas high school was united in marriage to a member of the faculty of Bristol borough schools yesterday in St. Ann's R. C. Church at the hour of two. The nuptial ceremony united Miss Violet T. DiNunzio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel DiNunzio, 606 Clymer street, and Mr. Joseph F. Sagolla, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sagolla, 344 Dorrance street, the bride's father escorting her to the altar, as Mrs. Louis V. Frease, Mill street, played a bridal march.

Mrs. Frease also provided accompaniment for Miss Anna Moffo, of Wayne, who sang "Ave Maria," "Panis Angelicus," and "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Jovina Narcisi, Washington street, who served in the capacity of bridesmaid, was attired in lavender, her ballerina length gown having strapless bodice and jacket of Chantilly lace, and skirt of nylon tulle. From a crown of orange blossoms there was arranged a veil of lavender, and the attendant carried a bouquet composed of three white orchids with lavender lips, white plumes and ivy.

The white bridal gown had nylon tulle skirt of ballerina length, and Chantilly lace bodice. Her fingertip veil of nylon tulle fell from a sweetheart style head-piece of lace. The bride carried a bouquet composed of a white orchid, two orchids with lavender lips, white plumes and ivy.

Mr. Salvatore Sagolla, Philadelphia, was best man for his brother.

The wedding reception was held in the social hall of St. Ann's Church.

Leaving for a trip to the Pocono mountains and Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Mrs. Sagolla was attired in a navy blue linen suit, matching accessories, and wore the orchids from her bouquet. The two will make their home at 606 Clymer street.

Choice of Mrs. DiNunzio, the bride's mother, for the wedding, was a slate blue crepe dress, navy blue accessories, feathered velvet hat. Mrs. Sagolla was attired in a dress of pink lace and white accessories. Both wore lavender orchids.

The former Miss DiNunzio is a graduate of Ballard high school, Seattle, Wash., and of Temple University, Phila., she being a member of Delta Sigma Epsilon Sorority. Her husband is an alumnus of Bristol high school, and of Temple University. He is elementary physical education instructor of Bristol schools.

"For me to live is Christ!"

If you were to ask me what Jesus means to me, I could think of no better reply than these six short words of the Apostle Paul. I can say this because in Christ I have found the final answer to my greatest needs. There is not a blessing in my life which, if I trace it back to the hand which gave it, does not lead me back to the Son of God. If there is anything good, anything true, anything that has brought lasting joy and gladness into my life—I recognize it as a gift which has come to me through faith in Jesus Christ, my Savior. In Him, above all, I have found complete forgiveness for all my sins. For, "The blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin." Having this forgiveness, peace, joy and hope, I have found life. A life that is full and free. A life that is glorious and triumphant. This is the "abundant life." The life that is led in Christ Jesus. This life brings to me pardon, power, companionship, truth, and ends in heaven.

QUARTER-FINALS
GET UNDER WAY
HERE TONIGHT

The quarter-final round of the playoffs of the Bristol Softball League will get under way this evening on Memorial field as Auto Boys meets 3M's. Tomorrow evening, Franklin plays Kaiser Metal, also on Memorial field. The quarter-finals are but a one-game series with the winners meeting in a three-game series.

It is most likely that Nick Lomma will do the throwing for Jim Capecchi's Auto Boys nine. Lomma ended the season with seven wins and five defeats.

Johnny Frank, who has several home runs to his credit this season, will handle the pitches of Lomma with "Chuck" Klein on first base. Klein finished the season well over the 300 mark. Sugar Sallustio, whose fielding and batting improved immensely after he was shifted to second base, will be at that position.

Tony Cauti, one of the best infielders in the loop, will be at short with Steve Clotti at third. The outfield will be composed of Horace Saxton, Harold Peltz, and Dick Addeo.

George Wallace is due to pitch for 3M's. Wallace won six and lost nine during the season. If he needs help it will be from Jim Katz who won three and lost two during the season.

Jim O'Brien will cover the initial sack for the scotch-tape makers, with Joe Dolan on second. Joe Fandetta will be at short with Al Ciambella covering the hot corner. The outfield will be composed of Dave Fairbank, Chuck Hinkle and Amy Lewis.

Auto Boys finished the season with 12 wins and 13 defeats, while 3M's won eleven and lost 13.

Cadets, Leaders Keep "On Toes" for Competition

a competition or outing to patch torn clothing or hard feelings, for all kinds of advice, to provide medication for cuts or bruises, or as is sometimes the case, disciplinary measures.

Here we just must digress to mention the time she found one lad in need of punishment while on a trip. When he arrived in her presence he was "crusty" some say. "Mom" proceeded with her job, using a few stern words, continued by washing his face and neck, behind his ears, then took steps to proceed with a bath preparatory to putting him to bed early as a "leson."

When the subject rebelled at the bath stage, "Mom" settled by standing just outside the bathroom door to make sure her orders were carried out. There were no "moves" for the lad that night however. (Note—He hasn't since pulled the stunt for which he was punished.)

It's not unusual for "Mom" Durham, or for Mrs. Straccio or the others to spot a lad with a dirty face just before time for appearance in competition. It might be the case of a "rookie" who is more or less new at the game. A cheerful but quick suggestion that he hurry to secure a wash-cloth reminds him that all demerits add up.

Cadets keep a watchful eye on each other's costumes, too, for a thread from a cloth used in dusting their patent leather hats or their shoes surely shows up on their uniforms as is attested by occasional quarter points taken off their scores. One of the girls learned to her sorrow during one competition that even though the top hook on her collar was tight, it would have been better to have been uncomfortable than to bring down the points.

One lad carries a suit-case filled with extra drum sticks, plumes, belts and buckles, just in case of need.

When it comes to the tonsorial work, "Mom" can care for that on occasion too. She carries hand clippers in her case, and many is the time that a cadet has had some extra "fuzz" removed from his neck just before going on the field. Lack of a hair-cut is readily noted.

tioned by the judges. The whisk-broom gets many a work-out likewise, as the girls and boys brush each other's uniforms just before the parade field. Cleaner fluid is an important item in the kit, to help rid uniforms of any spots. Close check is kept on the youngsters to see that their teeth are brushed regularly. And the girls know their stocking seams must be straight.

"Shoe-Shine" is the name given to two or three rookies who serve as shoe-shine boys. The kit contains brushes, cloths, and black and white polish. The shoe-shine subject reminded "Mom" of the time when one of the "Shoe-Shines" failed to carry out his duties in keeping close tabs on the bottles of polish. One was missing after one appearance of the corps out-of-town. "That will come out of your spending money," the lad was informed, and he proceeded to "dig down." That reminded him to keep a close watch on the polish thereafter.

All equipment — uniforms, hat boxes, gloves, etc.—are kept at the post home, but each cadet is charged with seeing that his or her gloves are cleaned after an appearance, and placed with the plume in the hat box. The box is then returned to the hall to be stored until needed again. But, according to the leaders, there is oftentimes a scurrying and a search when a cadet opens his or her box and finds that gloves are either dirty or missing. Members of the Cadet Corps, named by the Bracken Post, aid Mrs. Straccio and Mrs. Durham in preparing the cadets for appearances.

On the night before competition Commander Straccio calls the Cadets together and gives last-minute instructions, to the girls as a group, and to the boys as a group. He reminds them to see that uniforms, hats, gloves and plumes are in readiness, that shoes are shined, and that bugles are cleaned and no mouth-pieces missing. He and the Cadets know full well the close inspection given even the inside of a bugle.

"I keep about 25 pairs of gloves clean all the time, take them to competition, and in time of need we have them," says Mrs. Durham. Just now she has 11 gloves, all for the left hand (Cadets, what happens to those right handers?).

The night before a competition sees a big cleaning session in the post home. The girls and boys use plenty of "elbow-grease" as they shine, dust and polish. And the next day they are double-checked on the field. Even a "nick" as a cut in a uniform is referred to, can ruin a corps' chances of winning. Many are the questions put to the drum majorette by the judges regarding anything that is not just so. Excuses, even if legitimate ones, are not always accepted.

The color guard is responsible for the gun and the three flags carried by that group. The eagle must be shiny-bright, and the flags clean.

"We reached one town on a trip to Miami," says "Mom," "and couldn't find room for all to sleep. We never had to squeeze so tight. Five girls were in one room where there was a single bed. They slept cross-wise of the bed, and rested their feet on chairs. But of course there is never too much sleep when the kids are out like that. They can think of so many tricks to play and so much to talk about. That night the only one given a bed to himself was the kids' teacher on the trips, Carmen Mignoni. When I found that out, I said 'Here's where he gets company,' and when 'teacher' went to bed he found a Cadet already asleep."

Continuing to tell of the jaunts to national conventions, "Mom" mentioned that she rides in the bus with the girls, the men in the bus in the broad space on the floor in the back of the bus, and that is headquarters. "We always carry gallon thermos jugs of water, and sometimes bottles of orange juice. One restaurateur in Florida gave us six gallons of orange juice for our trip home. Another man there gave us a 'hand of bananas.'"

On the trips which the Cadets make in their own buses, orders are usually issued. It runs like this just before a sight-seeing stop is made: "You have a 20-minute stop. Don't take anything that doesn't belong to you. Behave yourselves and pay your bills." With a smile "Mom" recalled that after the corps stopped at one place for a light lunch, the management was out $1.95—some of the lads leaving without paying their 15c, 20c and 25c bills. "I called them together and put out a hat. The boys were told that we weren't interested in names, we just wanted whoever hadn't paid to 'fork up.' The hat contained $1.10 over. So we used it to pay our bus toll on the Burlington-Bristol bridge."

Yes, there are a lot of problems, many things to consider when dealing with a bunch of girls and boys, age seven to 21. "But it's worth it. They're a fine bunch" is the way the leaders sum it up.

On the night before competition Commander Straccio calls the Cadets together and gives last-minute instructions, to the girls as a group, and to the boys as a group. He reminds them to see that uniforms, hats, gloves and plumes are in readiness, that shoes are shined, and that bugles are cleaned and no mouth-pieces missing. He and the Cadets know full well the close inspection given even the inside of a bugle.

QUARTER-FINALS GET UNDER WAY HERE TONIGHT

The quarter-final round of the playoffs of the Bristol Softball League will get under way this evening on Memorial field as Auto Boys meets 3M's. Tomorrow evening, Franklin plays Kaiser Metal, also on Memorial field. The quarter-finals are but a one-game series with the winners meeting in a three-game series.

It is most likely that Nick Lomma will do the throwing for Jim Capucci's Auto Boys nine. Lomma ended the season with seven wins and five defeats.

Johnny Frank, who has several home runs to his credit this season, will handle the pitches of Lomma with "Chuck" Klein on first base. Klein finished the season well over the 300 mark. Sugar Sallustio, whose fielding and batting improved immensely after he was shifted to second base, will be at that position.

Tony Cauti, one of the best infielders in the loop, will be at short with Steve Clotti at third. The outfield will be composed of Horace Saxton, Harold Peltz, and Dick Addeo.

George Wallace is due to pitch for 3M's. Wallace won six and lost nine during the season. If he needs help it will be from Jim Katz who won three and lost two during the season.

Jim O'Brien will cover the initial sack for the scotch-tape makers, with Joe Dolan on second. Joe Fandetta will be at short with Al Clambella covering the hot corner. The outfield will be composed of Dave Fairbank, Chuck Hinkle and Amy Lewis.

Auto Boys finished the season with 12 wins and 13 defeats, while 3M's won eleven and lost 13.

Cadets, Leaders Keep "On Toes" for Competition

a competition or outing to patch torn clothing or hard feelings, for all kinds of advice, to provide medication for cuts or bruises, or as is sometimes the case, disciplinary measures.

Here we just must digress to mention the time she found one lad in need of punishment while on a trip. When he arrived in her presence he was "crusty" some say. "Mom" proceeded with her job, using a few stern words, continued by washing his face and neck, behind his ears, then took steps to proceed with a bath preparatory to putting him to bed early as a "lesson." When the subject rebelled at the bath stage, "Mom" settled by standing just outside the bathroom door to make sure her orders were carried out. There were no "moves" for the lad that night however. (Note—He hasn't since pulled the stunt for which he was punished.)

It's not unusual for "Mom" Durham, or for Mrs. Straccio or the others to spot a lad with a dirty face just before time for appearance in competition. It might be the case of a "rookie" who is more or less new at the game. A cheerful but quick suggestion that he hurry to secure a wash-cloth reminds him that all demerits add up.

Cadets keep a watchful eye on each other's costumes, too, for a thread from a cloth used in dusting their patent leather hats or their shoes surely shows up on their uniforms as is attested by occasional quarter points taken off their scores. One of the girls learned to her sorrow during one competition that even though the top hook on her collar was tight, it would have been better to have been uncomfortable than to bring down the points.

One lad carries a suit-case filled with extra drum sticks, plumes, belts and buckles, just in case of need.

When it comes to the tonsorial work, "Mom" can care for that on occasion too. She carries hand clippers in her case, and many is the time that a cadet has had some extra "fuzz" removed from his neck just before going on the field. Lack of a hair-cut is readily noticed by the judges. The whisk-broom gets many a work-out likewise, as the girls and boys brush each other's uniforms just before the parade field. Cleaner fluid is an important item in the kit, to help rid uniforms of any spots. Close check is kept on the youngsters to see that their teeth are brushed regularly. And the girls know their stocking seams must be straight.

"Shoe-Shine" is the name given to two or three rookies who serve as shoe-shine boys. The kit contains brushes, cloths, and black and white polish. The shoe-shine subject reminded "Mom" of the time when one of the "Shoe-Shines" failed to carry out his duties in keeping close tabs on the bottles of polish. One was missing after one appearance of the corps out-of-town. "That will come out of your spending money," the lad was informed, and he proceeded to "dig down." That reminded him to keep a close watch on the polish thereafter.

All equipment — uniforms, hat boxes, gloves, etc.—are kept at the post home, but each cadet is charged with seeing that his or her gloves are cleaned after an appearance, and placed with the plume in the hat box. The box is then returned to the hall to be stored until needed again. But, according to the leaders, there is oftentimes a scurrying and a search when a cadet opens his or her box and finds that gloves are either dirty or missing. Members of the Cadet Corps, named by the Bracken Post, aid Mrs. Straccio and Mrs. Durham in preparing the cadets for appearances.

On the night before competition Commander Straccio calls the Cadets together and gives last-minute instructions, to the girls as a group, and to the boys as a group. He reminds them to see that uniforms, hats, gloves and plumes are in readiness, that shoes are shined, and that bugles are cleaned and no mouth-pieces missing. He and the Cadets know full well the close inspection given even the inside of a bugle.

"I keep about 25 pairs of gloves clean all the time, take them to competition, and in time of need we have them," says Mrs. Durham. Just now she has 11 gloves, all for the left hand (Cadets, what happened to those right handers?). The night before a competition sees a big cleaning session in the post home. The girls and boys use plenty of "elbow-grease" as they shine, dust and polish. And the next day they are double-checked on the field. Even a "nick" as a cut in a uniform is referred to, can ruin a corps' chances of winning. Many are the questions put to the drum majorette by the judges regarding anything that is not just so. Excuses, even if legitimate ones, are not always accepted.

Yes, there are a lot of problems, many things to consider when dealing with a bunch of girls and boys, are seven to 21. "But it's worth it. They're a fine bunch" is the way the leaders sum it up.
